Course Synopsis

This Video Marketing course is designed for aspiring video marketers, content creators, and marketing professionals who want to develop strategic and effective video content for marketing and communication purposes. The course focuses on how videos can be planned and structured to capture audience attention, communicate clear messages, and support business objectives.

Participants will learn how to define the purpose of video content, understand target audiences, and design videos that align with specific marketing goals. The programme explores key storytelling principles that enhance audience engagement, including narrative structure, emotional connection, and the development of clear and purposeful video scripts.

The course also introduces practical approaches to planning video production, translating ideas into structured content plans such as shotlists and storyboards to ensure a clear creative direction. Participants will learn how to identify common quality issues in video content and apply appropriate solutions to maintain professional standards.

In addition, the programme covers platform publishing requirements, branding and legal compliance considerations, and the use of analytics to evaluate video performance. Emerging technologies, including artificial intelligence, are also introduced to support more efficient video content development and workflow planning.

By the end of the course, participants will be able to plan and develop purposeful video content that meets industry standards, engages audiences, and supports marketing objectives across digital platforms.
